

Genomes2People Research Program Donation Guidelines

Thank you for supporting genomic medicine and preventive health through a tax-deductible donation to our research program at Brigham and Women's Hospital (Tax exemption # 04-2312909). Led by Dr. Robert C. Green, Professor of Medicine (Genetics) at Harvard Medical School and the Broad Institute, the Brigham-based Genomes2People Research Program is producing compelling scientific evidence for the medical benefits and cost-effectiveness of using genomics for risk stratification and prevention of human disease. Central to this research is a commitment to an equitable future of medicine, and three of our ongoing projects address historic and ongoing racial disparities in the field of genomics. Along with our research, we have established the Brigham Preventive Genomics Clinic, the first academic clinic to offer comprehensive genomic sequencing for healthy individuals. While we have been highly successful in our academic work, your contribution will enable us to pursue projects that are more creative and daring than those we can support through conventional funding, and will support the training of future healthcare providers and scientists whom we are mentoring.
